Arguments against the use of translation in language teaching were initially raised in the nineteenth century and were largely reiterated in the 1960s and 1970s by those who believed in the direct, natural, and/or communicative methods of language teaching. The method they were objecting to was the so-called ' grammar translation ' method, which had been devised as a way of teaching modern languages in secondary schools in Prussia at the end of the eighteenth century, and also of teaching ...
